An Invitation: Come discover Shelter Neck Unitarian Universalist Camp: Enjoy an intergenerational event where you can bring your family for a relaxing weekend and explore creeks in a canoe; or just rock on the porch like you did at Grandma's. UCONCI subsidizes several Intergenerational Weekends each season for families including program, meals, campfire, and fun activities, open to all. Shelter Neck is more than just a place , - it's a "special place."

“Youth gather in Chapel”

For over a century, Shelter Neck has been a meeting place for Unitarian Universalists. Located in rural southeastern North Carolina, Shelter Neck originated as a school for children who otherwise would not have had access to education or broad cultural experiences. The National Alliance of Unitarian Women established the school in 1902 and provided students with studies in literature, languages, and fine arts along with the "3-Rs". The students returned the favor by providing Southern hospitality and devotion to their teachers and their school. Together, they shared a certain warmth which is still experienced today and permeates the atmosphere of the campus. In addition, the experimental farming at Shelter Neck was a forerunner of the state's agricultural experiment stations.

In 2012 The facility was used for a film production. Coordinating work and financial donations by the film company, Eagle Scouts, and volunteers, we were able to complete many needed structural and roof repairs, create a meditation walk, a volleyball court, a tot lot, and improved campfire area. New kitchen appliances, interior improvements, handicap accessibility improvements, and furniture upgrades have improved appearance, comfort, and usefulness. A section of Dix house is now air conditioned to provide relief on hot summer days. We have beautified the grounds, and removed several trees that threatened structures.

The future: A Wilmington consulting firm has worked with UCONCI to formulate a long range plan. Phase 1 is now almost complete. We are beginning fundraising for Phase 2 which will stabilize the existing structures and preserve them for future generations. Phase 3 will include major expansions to increase the uses of the facility for larger or multiple groups. Shelter Neck is truly becoming what its founders envisioned it to be - a multigenerational facility to serve Unitarian Universalists throughout the region..

“Come be a part of our future.”
